Runway to Recovery Fashion Show set for June 7

Raleigh Bynes participates in last year's fashion show

Cancer survivors will take center stage at the 11th annual Runway to Recovery fashion show on June 7 at 2 pm at the Hilton Garden Inn Savannah Midtown, presented by the Southeast Georgia Oncology Nursing Society. Tickets are $20.

Cancer survivors who are no longer in treatment will serve as models of clothing provided by Coldwater Creek and J. Parker Ltd.

WTOC news anchor Sonny Dixon will emcee the fashion show, which coincides with National Cancer Survivors Day.

"This event celebrates a survivor's journey through diagnosis, care, completion of treatment and recovery," said Dana Coleman, co-chair of the event. "It is very inspirational and uplifting to see these models smiling and regaining their life back after the turmoil of cancer." Money raised is directed to a holiday fund for cancer patients in need.

Funds are distributed equally among five local cancer centers to be given to patients with the greatest need.

The Southeast Georgia Oncology Nursing Society is an organization whose mission is to promote high professional standards in oncology nurses, to research information leading to improved care of cancer patients and their caregivers and to encourage nurses to specialize in the field.

It was formed in 1985 and is comprised of 30 oncology nurses from all hospitals in the area.

For tickets or more information, call 912-819-5794.

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. Sponsors Career Fair

Jr. Debutantes take part in the Career Fair sponsored by Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.

On April 11, 2009, Gamma Sigma Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Sorority sponsored a Career Fair for the 2009 Junior Debutantes.

Young women between the ages of 11 and 13 were exposed to several career choices during an open forum and exhibit.

The objective of the Career Fair is to expose youngsters to various professions in order to assist them in their decision making process regarding career choices.

They were given first-hand information regarding career options and the necessary educational preparation for each of the professions.

Students had the opportunity to ask questions of the presenters representing the following fields: education, law enforcement music, legal, computer technology, dentistry and medical.

Dr. Clemontine Washington, president of Gamma Sigma Omega and Gwendolyn Johnson, Program Chairperson, were both pleased with the outcome of the event.

The Career Fair Committee included Ethel Hunter, Coordinator and Brenda Jenkins, Eleanor Ginn, Queen Barnes and Sedalia Singleton.

The 2009 Junior Debutantes are: Rhonda Bryant, Jana Carpenter, Iyana Crawford, Denasia DeVore, Jayla Diggs, Raymoni Hall, Ariel Jones, Chelsea Ruth and Nekiria West.

MPC Launches Website Dedicated to the Unified Zoning Ordinance

The MPC has launched a new website (www.unified-zoning.org) that is dedicated to the Chatham County-Savannah Unified Zoning Ordinance process.

The site features information about the purpose of a Unified Zoning Ordinance (UZO), as well as presentations related to zoning, minutes from committee meetings and links to other planning resources.

The City and County zoning ordinances have not been updated since they were written over 50 years ago.

The ordinances have been amended over time; however, a number of inconsistencies and outdated procedures make it difficult for residents, developers and code enforcers to use these documents.

Charlotte Moore, Director of Special Projects, is coordinating the Unified Zoning Ordinance rewrite. She notes that public meetings will be scheduled later this year, as soon as a draft document is ready for review.

Until then, the public is encouraged to visit this website often for updated or new information.
